AN EDITORIAL

Jamestown Days
Good Promise

Sales promotions in nearly every Jamestown business establishment this Friday and Saturday represent the first tangible joint effort of local businessmen in many months. It is an indication of growth.

Such a promotion indicates growth in the line of reasoning. It represents growth in the line of merchandising. And it represents growth in the business stature of the village, itself.

Too many towns the size of Jamestown are swathed in a tight blanket of internal wrangling. Merchants spend more time "cutting one another's throats," so to speak, than in promoting their individual business interests.

Only through a mass, town-wide promotion such as the Jamestown Bargain Days being advertised in this widely-distributed issue of The Guardian, can merchants really promote their individual businesses at a reasonable cost.

This joint effort offers the buyer more.

Every advertiser is offering at least one bona fide bargain. Something you may not need this week but can't afford to pass up because of the price involved.

This means bigger business for everyone. It means a healthier village economy, a healthier village attitude. Jamestown's mercantile center means to serve agricultural Greene County. And it is taking the proper steps.

Jamestown Bargain Days will continue to grow. Jamestown, itself, will continue to grow because it is populated by such advance-thinking residents as those who have gone "all out" in the effort coming up this weekend.

Cedarville Hunts
New Water Supply

Test wells are to be drilled in the Cedarville area in hopes of solving that village's water shortage. Authorization was given by Village Council Monday night to the Board of Public Affairs to spend up to $1,000 in sinking test shafts.

The joint meeting was the first step toward solution of the water shortage. Unless new wells can be found, the village may be forced into taking water from the stone quarry within the village limits and building a treatment plant.

Experts agree that extensive rock formations in the village vicinity rule out the possibility of an adequate well supply's being found. Council and Board members, however, want to try that method first.

The treatment plant would be far more expensive.

Village Solicitor Phillip Aultman was directed to delve in possible purchase of the stone quarry case a well supply is not found.

What effect this might have on the $40,000 clubhouse being built there now by a group of skin divers was not discussed completely.

Dr. John Lounsbury, Antioch College geology professor, and Charles J. Lahman, Dayton consulting engineer, as well as two well drillers, met with the village groups.

Dr. Lounsbury used maps of Greene County and the Cedarville area to show geological formations indicated that it was unlikely the village could find sufficient water in the immediate area

Cedarville Baptist
Profs Key Speakers

The Greene County Fellowship of Regular Baptist Churches will sponsor a "Pastor's Conference" March 25 and 26. This ministerial "work shop" will be held in the Xenia Bible Church, where the Rev. Andrew Hutchison is pastor, and in the Emmanuel Baptist Church, Xenia, where the Rev. F. Dale Cadman is pastor. Some fifty Baptist pastors of Central and Southern Ohio were extended invitations to attend.

The Conference will open with a luncheon in the Xenia Bible Church on Monday noon. This will be followed by two afternoon sessions with Rev. John Stoll, registrar of Cedarville College, speaking on "The Atonement" followed by Professor Bruce Turnbull of Cedarville College using as his subject, "The Warnings of Neo-Orthodoxy." The 7:30 p.m. service will be open to the public when the Rev. Alan Metcalf, Director of the Hebrew Christian Society of Cleveland, will bring a message on "The Church and Jewish Evangelism."

Tuesday sessions will be held in the Emmanuel Baptist Church beginning at 9:30 a.m. with a pastor's devotional hour lead by Mr. Warren Webber, Director of Music at Cedarville College.

Prof. William Ambrose will bring an interesting and timely message to the Pastor's Conference when at 10:30 a.m. he speaks on "Psychology and the Pastor."

The Rev. James T. Jeremiah, President of Cedarville College, will bring one of the afternoon messages followed by Dr. Arthur Williams, Dean of Students at Cedarville College. The closing meeting at 7:30 p.m. will again be opened to the public when Dr. John Dun, Dean of the Baptist Bible Seminary, Johnson City, New York, will bring the final message.

BIG SWITCH COMING

Telephones Changes Set

You'll soon be dialing ORchard before you get a Jamestown number.

And for Cedarville the number will be preceded by SOuthfield. In Bowersville the prefix will be GLenview. The change to the prefix type of number which will take place in all the areas served by the Xenia exchange is a prelude to a system for nationwide dialing of long distance calls according to H. B. Johnston, commercial manager of the Ohio Bell Xenia office.

Change of numbers will become effective with the delivery of the 1957 directories next month.

Numbers in the Xenia area behind the prefix will remain the same with the exception of Jamestown.

The first number in Jamestown will be changed from 4 to 5. For instance, The Guardian number is now 4-5091. It will become ORchard 5-5091.

Johnston pointed out that subscribers should keep the upcoming change in mind if they are buying new stationary or business cards or having any work done with their telephone number on it.

The shift will convert Xenia to DRake, Bellbrook to VInewood, Clifton to ROkwell, Spring Valley to OXbow, and Yellow Springs to ROkwell.

HARPER DOESN'T SHOW

Jamestown Council 'On Notice'

Jamestown village councilmen Monday night were read another registered letter from Floyd O. Harper concerning alleged use of village equipment for private gains.

Mr. Harper stated "It is not necessary for me to appear..." before council. He pointed out the "board is or should be aware..." of the situation.

Council had answered a letter read before the March 4 meeting in which Mr. Harper made his original charges. Council, in that letter, requested Mr. Harper to appear at this Monday's meeting and outline what it was specifically that he protested.

Mr. Harper declined, however, and did not make any specific charges.

He did say that the letter was meant to "put Council on notice" that its activities were under "close scrutiny."

He added that in the event it becomes known that village equipment is being used for private gain, "I intend to take all proper legal steps to fix responsibility..." for such action.

Councilmen agreed Monday night that, since there are no specific charges, to take no formal action on Mr. Harper's letter.

No further action was taken Monday concerning the proposed installation of a radio in the Jamestown police cruiser. Two representatives of a radio manufacturer were unable to attend because of illness.

Cedarville Mayor
Slaps on Curfew

Boys and girls under 16 will be banned from the streets of Cedarville after 9:30 at night, unless accompanied by parents, starting April 1.

Mayor Harold Spitler slapped down the curfew Tuesday. The attempt to curb juvenile vandalism is believed to be the only such active curfew in Greene County

Grass Fires

The Jamestown Fire Department was called out twice Saturday to put out grass fires. Both were started from burning trash. They were at Robert Williamson's on the Charleston Pike and at Wayne Carey's on the Jeffersonville Pike. Flames were limited entirely to the grass.

DR. JURKAT UNIT FORMED

Cedarville Future Teachers Elected

On February 18 installation of officers in the newly-organized Dr. Jurkat FTA chapter of Cedarville was held. The Horace Mann FTA of Yellow Springs took charge of installation exercises. Vaughn Lewis, county superintendent, was the speaker for the evening.

The organization, under the leadership of Robert Impson, Cedarville superintendent, was organized February 5 in connection with the national association of FTA. The club was named after Dr. Jurkat, a life resident of Cedarville. He was for many years associated with Cedarville College in the teaching of Bible, Greek and Hebrew. Any student who studied under Dr.

Virginia Bennington
... President

Jurkat looked to him as a person with a brilliant mind and an authority around the college. In his latter years he assisted in the teaching of Latin at Cedarville High School when the school was without a Latin instructor.

The aim of the organization is to encourage capable students to enter the teaching profession and to guide them while still in high school. The Cedarville chapter is limited to sophomores, juniors and seniors. These must have a 2.5 average.

The officers are president, Virginia Bennington; vice-president, Peggy Myers; secretary, Virginia Cahill; treasurer, Judy Wiseman; librarian, Jane Ellen Dobbins.

The group plans to visit the University of Cincinnati on March 27 for a tour of the campus and sitting in on college classes.

FORTUNE PLAYS
NO FAVORITES

Fate is, at least, playing no favorites among Greeneview School District pupils--or maybe the word is fortune. Pupils attending Greeneview North, Old Ross School, had an unscheduled vacation Tuesday because of failure in that plant's water system.

The last water failure in the system occurred at Greeneview South. Now, that makes everything even, doesn't it?

from wells. He said the geological formations indicate that the closest area where the village might expect to find sufficient water is three to 3 1/2 miles west of the village. It also was pointed out at the meeting that tests had been made on the quarry by engineers from the state and they found an adequate supply of water, at the quarry. Both Lahman and Dr. Lounsbury also advised council that there was a good possibility that the quarry would solve the supply problem, but this would involve the erection of a treatment plant. If the test wells do not indicate there is sufficient water supply available there, then the village officials will have to decide which would be better, to drill a well some distance from the village and pipe the water in or use the quarry and erect a treatment plant.

Law Enforcement Lies Within Town's Wants

Law enforcement often is a matter of how badly it's wanted by the citizenry. The Cedarville area, particularly, is a good example of what happens when the populace is apathetic about conditions.

The recent indictments of two persons in Greene County and the binding to the Clark County grand jury of a third person point up at least one such instance in that area. Sam Hutchison and a woman reported to live at his house on Charleton Mill rd., both have been bound to the Greene County grand jury, Hutchison on a charge of rape and Catherine Chrislip on a charge of pandering. Raymond Allen, Springfield, has been bound to the Clark County panel on a charge of pandering. All three counts evolve from alleged attempts at procurement of a young Springfield housewife and nurse for the purposes of prostitution in the Cedarville area.

Circumstantial evidence points to the possibility that Hutchison has been involved in nefarious activities for several years.

Law enforcement officials of Greene County have been aware of this. Former Sheriff Clarence A. Stewart was made well aware of this situation when an area woman came to him about two years ago, claiming she and another woman had been held against their will in the Hutchison house.

That idea, of course, was debatable. So are the rape and pandering charges pending now. But it's obvious something goes on on the shadowy side of the law at the Hutchison manse.

Testimony in a Springfield Municipal Court hearing during Allen's case indicated there is a bar at the Hutchison place and that "customers" have been hit for as high as "$50 to $150 to spend the night with one of the girls" -- those are Allen's words while he was under oath.

Then, for the record, there's no secret surrounding the activities of at least two houses in "Little Pittsburgh" at Cedarville and maybe a few more within the village, itself. And the "rum-runners" of Jamestown are known to all.

"Dry" voting led to the bootlegging activities going on both in Cedarville and Jamestown -- no doubt about that. The "dry" situation may be enforceable if the citizenry is alert constantly. But a law that is violated with the sanction of nearly everyone is no good as a law.

Maybe it's time for the area to study this situation a bit more closely. Either you want it dry or you don't. If dry is the wish, it's merely a wish at present. The situation, really, is that Cedarville and Jamestown are just about as wet per capita -- if not more so -- than many another place where liquor sales are legal.

Half-way operation of law enforcement is no better than half-way operation of our day-to-day lives.

The 1957 Soil Bank Acreage Reserve regulations for tobacco have been changed to permit increased participation by farmers having acreage allotments for tobacco, according to Delmar L. Bone, Co. Manager for the local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Office.

Tobacco Acreage Reserve regulations have been modified to permit the signing of all agreements offered by farmers within present maximum farm limitations for those crops. For Burley tobacco this is the larger of 1 acre of 30 percent of the farm allotment and 3 acres or 30 percent of the farm allotment for cigar-filler types 42 and 44.

These changes will permit the immediate resumption of signing Acreage Reserve Agreements in those Tobacco Counties that have exhausted their initial allotment of Acreage Reserve funds.

Further Changes have been made for Burley Tobacco. Farmers will be permitted to sign Acreage Reserve Agreements putting all the burley acreage they want to, up to their farm allotments, in the Program.

Department officials explained that the changes were made on the basis of an analysis of preliminary reports of Acreage Reserve Agreements signed so far for the respective crops. This analysis indicated that sufficient funds would be available to permit making these changes.

Bone reminded all Tobacco Growers that March 1 is the last day to sign an Acreage Reserve Agreement for either types of Tobacco.

EVEN THE PARAKEETS HAPPY

Governor's Mansion Radiates Splendor

By Jody Gatten
Even the turquoise parakeet is happy in the new Governor's mansion!

He twitters proudly in the upstairs sitting room against a background of starlight gold walls and carpeting. Originally, this color-conscious bird was to live downstairs in the garden room. But when his cage was painted to match the pineapple wrought iron in that room, he was unhappy--hence the purchase of a pair of tangerine and yellow canaries for the garden room and the transfer of the parakeet.

Further proof of Mrs. C.

William O'Neill's meticulous handling of colors came Saturday, March 16, when she and a battery of cabinet wives were hosts to 500 Ohio newswomen and wives of newsmen at an afternoon tea. The event marked the official christening of the newly-redecorated mansion's social life.

Guests, warmly greeted, were ushered into the great high-ceilinged drawing room, a symphony of powder blues with a single lavender chair and touches of windsor rose in upholstery and needlepoint. Doors at both sides of the fireplace lead into a bright music room done in similar colors.

Tea was served to the ladies in the mahogany-paneled dining room. The Oriental rug with a small floral print came from the old Governor's Mansion on E. Broad St. The powder blue theme was carried into this room in the draperies and ceilings. A highlight of the dining room is the crystal chandelier with matching wall candelabra.

The perfect place to sip tea is the sunny indoor garden room with stone walls and stone floors. Done in tones of beige, jade green and yellows, the room is alive with green plants in large planters arranged to complement the pineapple toned wrought iron furniture in the room.

The guests also had an opportunity to inspect the family bedrooms, carpeted bathrooms and small kitchen which make up the governor's apartment. Before long, Mrs. O'Neill plans to close this area so her family can have some privacy. She is especially happy with the master bedroom, a spacious room with a southern exposure done in dusty blush pink. The deep plush carpet has been dyed to match the pink pure silk draperies. Furnishings are Italian provincial with fruit-wood finish.

A peek at the children's rooms revealed a doll-bedded bedroom in turquoise, daughter Peggy's favorite color, and scarlet and gray bedroom complete with piggy bank belonging to son, Dubby.

The tour was completed with inspection of the family room, an upstairs sitting room with a large bay window. The gold color theme is accented by the large coffee table, television and cabinet in Chinese decor. are the Governor and Mrs. Easily accessible to this room O'Neill's offices.

JEFFERSON RATES THIRD

In School Attendance

Greeneview and Jefferson school District Boards of Education have taken the Greene County lead in a new "junior high" theory advocated by the County Superintendent's office.

Both schools already have applied for four-year high school charters from the state.

The new plan calls for a gradual step-up to departmentalization of school such as carried on in the high school grades.

Seventh graders would continue through the "self-contained classroom"—one teacher for the entire grade, teaching all subjects.

Eighth grade teaching would be broken into "block of time" periods with a grouping of some subjects. Then, in the ninth grade, pupils would go into the complete departmentalization.

Administrators feel the method would slow down the pressure on immature children, would continue reading greater emphasis for two more years, would make available teachers with elementary certificates as well as high school certificates for the seventh and eighth grades, would give unity of approach from the teaching standpoint, would eliminate seventh and eighth graders from study
